"For some time I have been watching the fall of Chin & Parsonavich. I first became aware of their work in Overload magazine (which was shoved in my face at a comic convention). They displayed no talent for innovative panel arrangement in combination with weak draftsmanship. But less significant to me were their underlying incapacity to express mood and emotional content. I wretched at their eager probe within the borders of the state of the art as they had found it.

Black Belt Hamsters demonstrates no movement in Chin & Parsonavich's creative progress. In this book they display more immature use of the panel as well as a cowardly experiment in inking and style. I am not looking forward to the rest of the series!"

SWILL EISNER

"A big snorin' tale of the Pre-World War III blues! If yer lookin' fer fun and excitement — look elsewhere!"

WILT SIMONSEN

"This will never be the new standard by which comics will be judged . . . a little bit hideous, a little bit ridiculous, and very expensive, HO, HO, HO!"

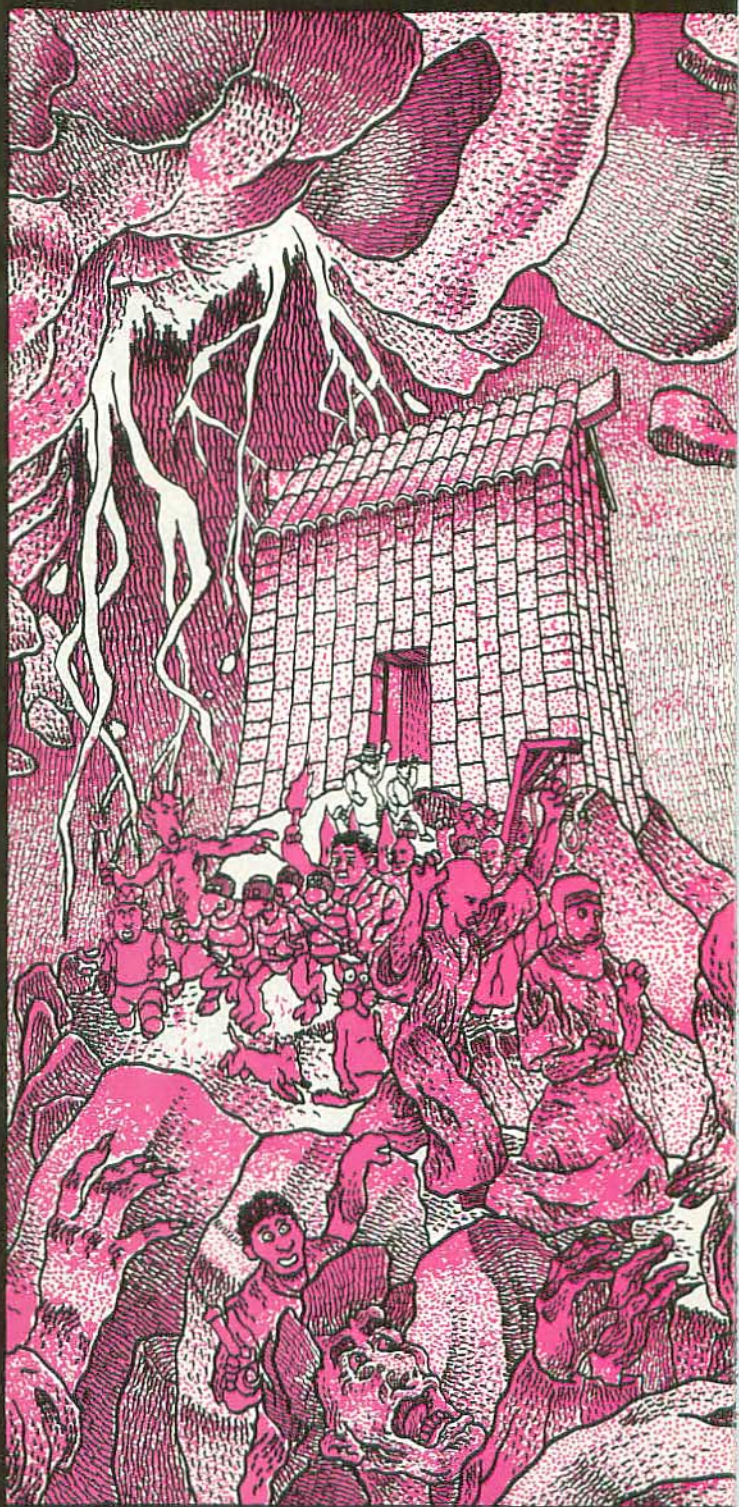

SANTA KLAUS JANSON

"What a blatant rip-off! Our lawyers will be in touch!"

BEASTMAN AND LARD

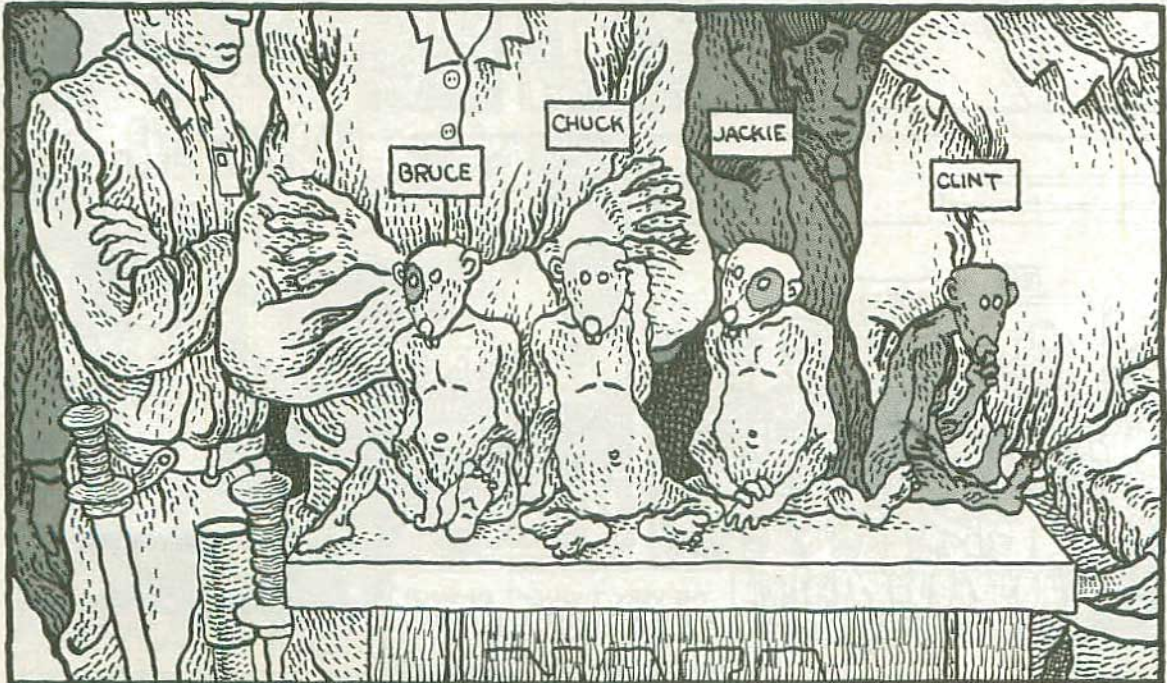

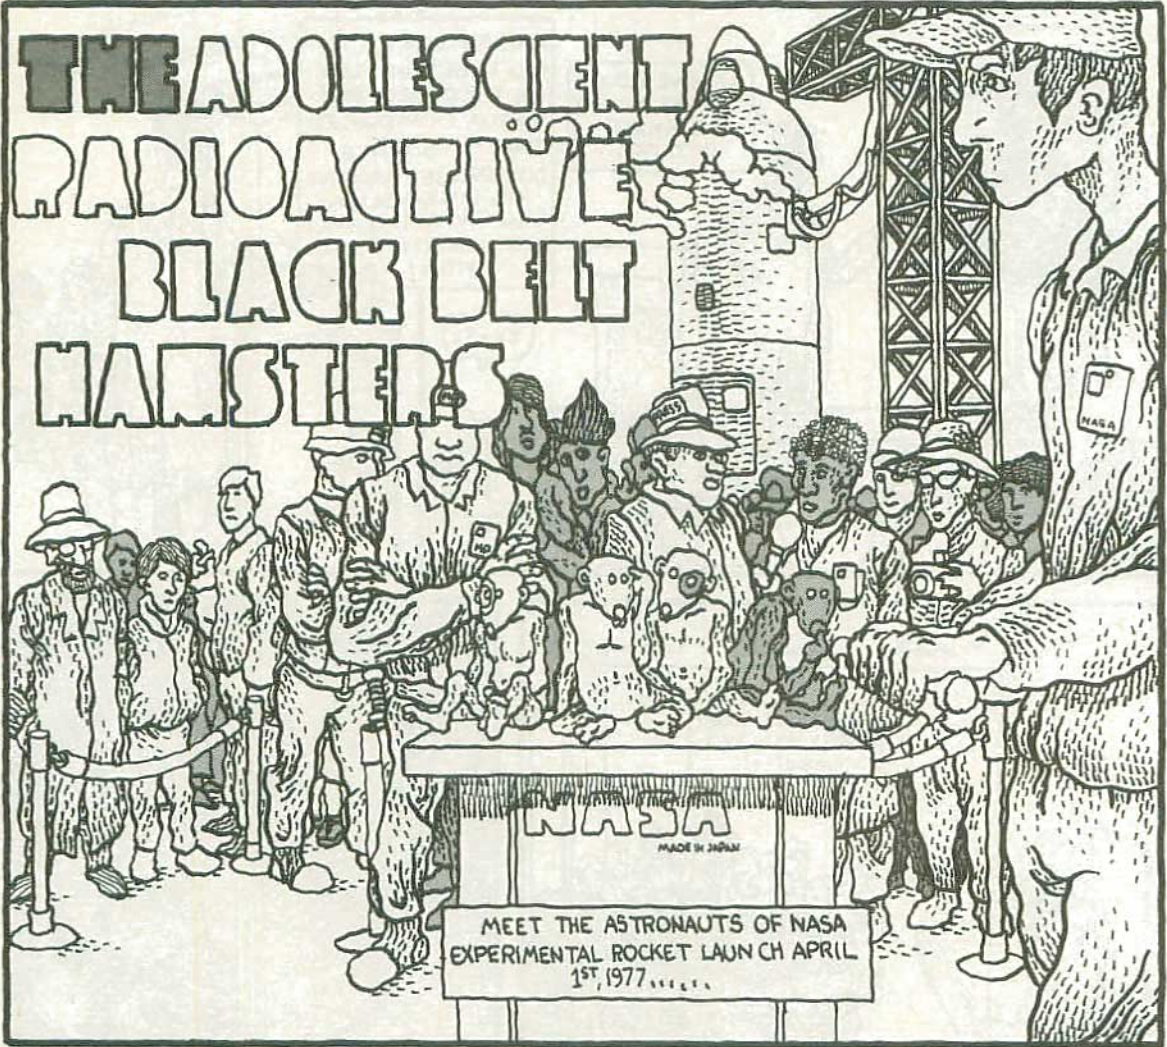

"They held me at gunpoint! What else could I do?!"

-COMMENT-

QUESTION: WHY DID IT TAKE THE HAMSTERS SO LONG TO PUSH THE SELF-DESTRUCT BUTTON?

ANSWER: AS AN EXPERT THEORIST ON THE HAMSTER DECISION-MAKING PROCESS, IT IS MY OPINION THAT HAMSTERS, AT BEST, ARE INDECISIVE, PUTTING OFF IMPORTANT DECISIONS UNTIL THE LAST POSSIBLE MOMENT.

CHIN, THE TWO PREVIOUS PANELS WERE THE MOST SUGAR-COATED ATTEMPTS AT SAPPY SENTIMENTALITY I'VE EVER ENCOUNTERED IN COMICS. IT MADE ME WANT TO THROW UP!

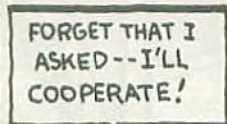

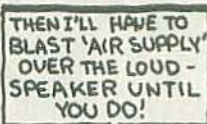

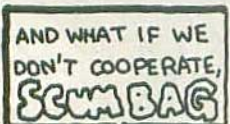

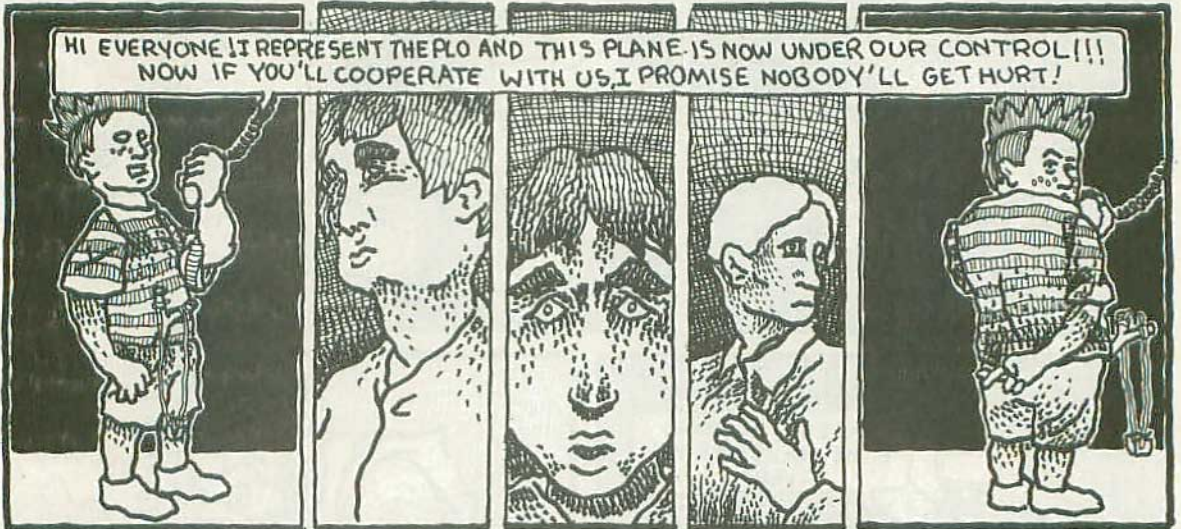

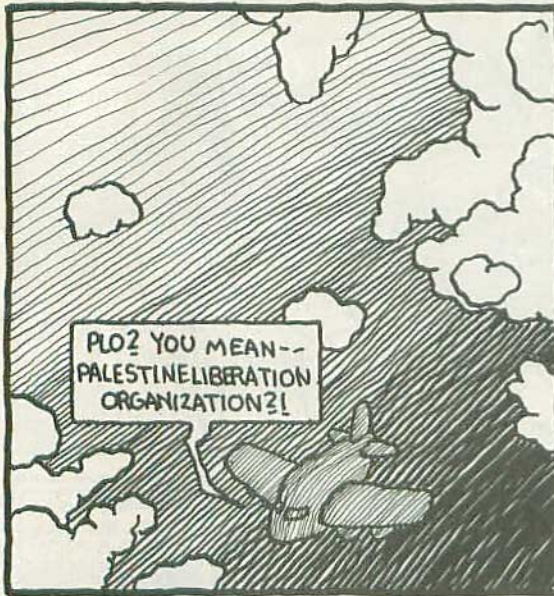

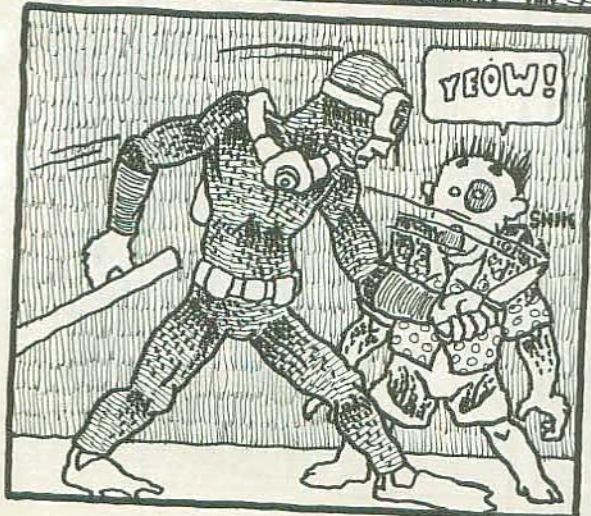

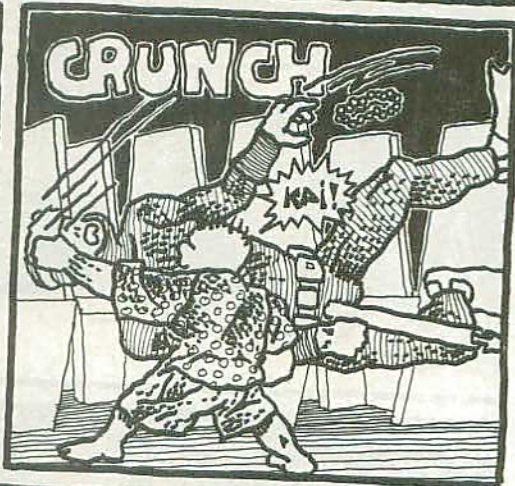

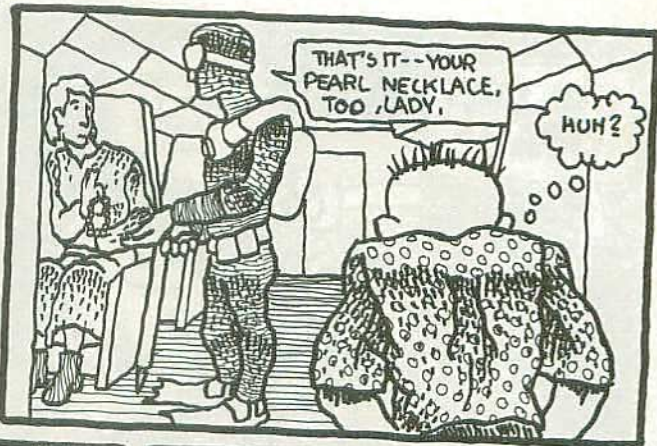

PUBLISHER'S NOTE:
THE PREVIOUS 2 PANELS ARE NOT MEANT TO ENCOURAGE
READERS TO USE DRUGS, OR TO
INSINUATE THAT THE CREA-
TORS OF THIS COMIC BOOK ARE DRUG USERS, (A LA THE UNDER GROUND CAR TOONISTS OF THE 1960'S.) TRUTH IS PARSONAVICH
AND CHIN ARE BOTH NATURAL-
LY WEIRD. THEY REQUIRE NO
HALLUCINOGENIC CHEMICALS
TO COME UP WITH IDEAS OR TO DRAW.
